University of California, Davis, Places in Top 25 on Peace Corps' 2013 Top Colleges Rankings

Ties Santa Cruz for No.5 Ranking Among California Schools, No. 17 Nationally

WASHINGTON, February 5, 2013 – This year, the University of California, Davis (UC Davis), takes the No. 5 spot among large California schools on Peace Corps' 2013 Top Colleges, ranking No. 17 nationally. The annual list recognizes the highest volunteer-producing colleges and universities for small, medium, large and graduate institutions. There are currently 60 undergraduate alumni from UC Davis serving overseas.

"Every year, graduates of colleges and universities across the United States are making a difference in communities overseas through Peace Corps service," said Peace Corps Acting Director Carrie Hessler-Radelet. "As a result of the top-notch education they receive, these graduates are well prepared for the challenge of international service. They become leaders in their host communities and carry the spirit of service and leadership back with them when they return home."

UC Davis moves up six places from its No. 23 national ranking the previous year. This marks the 11th straight year that UC Davis has appeared among the top 25 large universities. Historically, UC Davis has produced 1,408 Peace Corps volunteers, making it the 16th all-time top-producing school.

"Peace Corps announces Top Colleges annually to recognize the schools that contribute the most alumni who are making a difference overseas through volunteer service," said Peace Corps West Coast Regional Manager Janet Allen. "We thank and congratulate the University of California, Davis, as one of the 23 universities from the West Coast producing globally-minded leaders who turn idealism into action as Peace Corps Volunteers. It's wonderful to see UC Davis move up six spots this year."

Collectively, the University of California (UC) system produced 489 currently-serving volunteers. In total, six UC campuses are ranked on the list of top 25 large universities, composing all top five volunteer-producing schools in California. The state's top-producing colleges are ranked as follows:

RANK	SCHOOL	NATIONAL RANK	NUMBER OF VOLUNTEERS
1	University of California, Berkeley	6	85
1	University of California, Los Angeles	6	85
3	University of California, Santa Barbara	10	76
4	University of California, San Diego	13	70
5	University of California, Davis	17	60
5	University of California, Santa Cruz	17	60

Currently, more than 8,000 volunteers are working with communities in 76 host countries on projects related to agriculture, community economic development, education, environment, health and youth development.

During Peace Corps service, college graduates make a difference in communities overseas. Volunteers return home as global citizens with cross-cultural, leadership, language, teaching and community development skills that position them for advanced education and professional opportunities in today's global job market. Ninety percent of volunteer positions require a bachelor's degree. Americans with backgrounds in agriculture, environment, teaching English as a second language, and other technical or language skills related to Peace Corps assignment areas are encouraged to apply for service one year in advance of their target departure date. The next application deadline is February 28, 2013.

The Peace Corps ranks Top Colleges annually according to the size of the student body. Small schools have less than 5,000 undergraduates, medium-sized schools have between 5,000 and 15,000 undergraduates and large schools have more than 15,000 undergraduates. Rankings are calculated based on fiscal year 2012 data as of September 30, 2012 as self-reported by Peace Corps volunteers.
